Green training launched for UAE establishments

BY A STAFF REPORTER

AIMED to help local establishments implement sustainability guidelines and achieve certification from global environmental rating systems, a green education programme titled 'Mayfair Training' has been launched in Dubai.

According to a spokesperson of the programme, it offers a selection of environmental, sustainability and technical courses for the country's enterprises. The programme focuses on improving clients' engagement across all facets of sustainability, including environmental responsibility and improvement as well as social responsibility.

Amani Choudhry, CEO, Mayfair Group, said, "The sustainable and environmental courses will provide an understanding of the changing nature of human interaction with the environment, examine current conservation policy, strategies and issues, and look at the involvement and responses of commercial, industrial and public sectors to environmental issues."

According to her, two main areas of interest are addressed in the training programme; the first being sustainability and environmental management from a business perspective.

"The second focus of the 'Mayfair Green' training programme will be on technical environmental subjects, which will provide in-depth training on topics."
